Rev. Geo. S. Hill.

We believe that once in a while there is an epidentic in the country which makes other places anxious to get our clergymen away from us. A few years ago they were suddenly called away till but one remained. Now with the loss of Rev. A. G. Hill of the Free Baptist, Rev. W. H. Lane of the. Baptist, and Rev. H. S. Whitidan of the Universalist societies, there is the further probability that Rev. Geo. S. fill of the harch of the Messiah will go also.

For some time there has been a vacancy fathe pulpit of St. John's Episcopal churh in Presque Isle, and a need of some person . of good financial capacity to look after the effairs of the St. John School which islocated there, and is under the control of the church! It is no wonder Mr Hill was selected as the man. He is a bus pess man of capacity and has had experience such as few clergymen get, in business affairs. He is also an excellent preach ir, and is improving rapidly as a pulpit oragor. The church at Presque Islewant hid, and the Bishop, we understand, has driged appoint that it is his duty to accept; that he is needed and onet to you

It is bad news to the chure I here, which was prospering under his care. (The church debt has been paid off, in a majoner flattering to him, and the prospect seemed bright for the future. It was a surprise to Mr. Hil, who had just arranged to establish his residence here. We know he likes Dexter and dislikes to go elsewhere. He has the matter under consideration, and has not yet decided to accept the call. If it was not for the question of "duty" which is urged upon him, we think he would quickly decide to remain here.—Decter Gazette.

"The election of 1884 was in many respects a most peculiar one. The gentlemany whom the Republican party phaced af the head of its Presidential teket had for many years been thoroughly known to the great mass of the people of the country. Twice he had been the leading capididate for the Presidential nomination in Republican conventions, and had seen the prize almost within his grasp. And when the majority of the delegates to the convention of 1884 were chosen, but faw men believed that his name would be brought before the convention, and still fewer, in view of the matter such consideration in Repurport in relation to the residential momination in Repurport in relation to the convention of the Canada selection of the facts, and instant representations had been made to the British Minister to call to account the collection of the Canada selection of the United States. While the Mugwung leaders who, under the guise of purists in politics, sought to conceal their real motive of opposition, viz., dishike to stalwart leadership and disgrin at a nomination they had opposed, may, and dioubtless will, continue adherents of President Cloveland, yet the rank and file of those who voted against their party's nomines two years ago are, I believe, back in the Republican party to stay, and will be found in the next Presidential campaign supporting the party's nominees.

"The men who up to 1884 had been among the most devoted atherents of the Democratle party, but who in that year voted for Blaine and Logan, are almost solidly for Mr. Blaine for a monimation. Not all who so talk will vote against their party, but many will, and the support given by the others to the Democracy will be a half-hearted support.

The use of the microscope has revealed many forms of disease about whose origin was known, both among anima's and plants. The potato rot is now conceded to be the result of a minute fungus which attacks all parts of the plant, leaf, stem and tubers. By those ignorant of the life history of this tiny parasitic plant little httention is paid to its appearance on the ' ops; and no alarm is experienced until the atoes incaffected.

It is usually indicated by the tops prewriting a blighted, brownish, spotted, dead appearance. A close examination of the potatoes showing this will discover innumerable slender stems growing up out of the surface of the leaves and stems of the affected plants. These branch and swell out at the ends into pear-diaped, minute bodies of spores, which are produced by millions. When ripe they separate from into the almosphere, where they are waft-

Under layorable conditions of moisture: and heat the contents of a microscopics spore may push out a long, minute tube. which can penetrate into any part of the potato plant and give rise to the fungus. The mature plant consists of many color-less, branching, thread-like structures. These perfetrate the tissues of the potato and feed upon the juices, so that it soon veakens and begins to waste away. (This minute, microscopic plant is a low form of vegetable life, fastening upon other plants and feeding upon their juices. A wet season supplies conditions well adapted for

The rot usually appears about the first two weeks in August, and if the weather is favorable its spread is very rapid, for as soon as the thread-like structure which arises from the spore is developed, it immediately becomes spore-bearing. Hence the importance, of examining the plants for the appearance of the brownish spots that indicate the presence of the fungus. ...

1. As soon as discovered, dig the pota-toes. Delay will allow it to spread to thestems, and thence to the tubers. If it reaches these and damp weather comes,

2. After digging, the potatoes should be put in a cool, dry place, thus surrounding them with conditions unfavorable for the growth of the fungus, if any happens to be upon them.

3. Growing early varieties is worthy of consideration, so that they may mature before the season arrives when this para-

should be gathered and burned, so as to destroy the millions of spores which may affected, reject them, and plant in welldrained land. If the potatoes to be used for seed have been taken from cellars, where affected ones were kept, they are likely to have the microscopic spores on
